Report of the President

by Dr. Robert W. Neff

Each year I have taken this opportunity to present to our many loyal alumni and friends highlights of the past year at Juniata College and to set a general theme for the year ahead. Last year our Sculpting Futures theme was introduced in this message.

As you can see from the cover of this publication, the theme for 1989-90 encourages our reflection in several directions. So many generations of loyal Juniatiens have passed through our corridors, and so many generations are touched by Juniata on a daily basis, that we can say with tremendous pride "For Generations . . . Juniata College."

Before highlighting our achievements of the past year, let me share a letter I received from Ethel Will. Her letter demonstrates how all generations of Juniatiens interrelate.

In September I received a letter from Ethel Will who wrote,

Dear President Neff, I am enclosing my check in the amount of $25,000 for the purpose of establishing a new scholarship fund to be named the Homer C. and Ethel F. Will Scholarship Fund in Biology. This is the scholarship mentioned in Homer's will. It is for incoming, needy freshmen enrolling in the course of biology.

My reason for sending this before November or December is that I received a telephone call from Washington, D.C. this morning informing me that there's going to be a big crash in October and everyone will be bankrupt. How about that! . . .

celebrate such a relationship!

When I came to Juniata in 1986 we planned a presidential ball, to which persons of all ages would be invited. I was told such an event would not succeed. The Hokey Pokey, the Chicken Dance . . . would everyone want to do that kind of thing? Nobody wants to act that crazy. We discovered that evening that students were going back to their residence halls to bring other students to the Ball. They said, "We're having a great time, Come on over." After that first Ball, the students asked to have an annual Presidential Ball. On February 17, 1990, we will hold our fourth Presidential Ball.

Juniata has taken steps to ensure that this intergenerational character will thrive, not just within our campus community, but also within the community at large. Allow me to provide some examples.

— The Early Childhood Education Center enrolls Huntingdon County preschool aged children and provides a unique learning environment for Juniata College students from a variety of disciplines. The Center's students provide an often comforting presence of young children on our campus.

— This past summer several of our faculty members, in conjunction with members of our local educational community, began a program called "New Visions." The program brought gifted students to the Juniata campus for a week of intensive learning. These fourth through seventh graders lived in the residence halls, ate in the dining hall, and worked with Juniata faculty members in areas such as robotics, acting, creative expression, and chemistry. The students gave rave reviews at the end of their experience on campus.

— Each summer hundreds of high school athletes come to our campus to participate in basketball, volleyball, and baseball camps. Our hope is that these young people will come away with a sense of the importance we assign to hard work, fair play, and strong values.

— This year we expanded the Juniata College Half-Tuition Program to include all counties contiguous to Huntingdon. The program allows residents of the eight county region who have been out of high school for at least five years to attend regular classes at the College at a half tuition rate. The response has been overwhelming. The introduction of the non-traditional student in our regular classes has provided, according to many of our faculty members, a perspective which never before existed in the undergraduate classroom setting at Juniata. As often happens, a program established to express our appreciation to our community has returned tremendous benefits.

— Our cooperative effort with the region's school districts, the Chemistry Teachers Science Education Improvement Project, has brought Juniata widespread recognition. Most recently the project was recognized as one of ten exemplary achievements among colleges and universities in the nation.

— Our Business Outreach Center continues to assist small businesses in the region with the challenges that come with running a business. The Center also provides a wealth of opportunity to our students who work hand-in-hand with our faculty members in this much needed effort.

Add to the foregoing list the library privileges that we extend to the community; the opportunities available through our athletic facilities; our Artist Series and other cultural offerings; and the active participation of our students in such organizations as Special Olympics, Big Brother/Big Sister, and the Special Friends project and you sense how Juniata truly is for community, for excellence, for scholarly achievement, and "For Generations."

Now, while it is true that it is the people oriented tasks and programs which bring life and meaning to our community, it is only through your financial support that we can achieve and succeed. Allow me to highlight some of your achievements, which you will find documented in this report.

Juniata enjoyed the support of alumni, friends, foundations, and corporations, culminating in total gifts of approximately $2.5 million during 1988-89. The Annual Support Fund, included in the foregoing gifts, moved from its goal of $300,000 in 1986-87 and $500,000 in 1987-88 to a goal of $600,000 in 1988-89. That goal was surpassed with a total of $602,892. Alumni Support increased from 31% to 38%.

Two years ago we received a $300,000 grant from the Pew Charitable Trusts, payable over four years, for a faculty development program. A condition of the grant was a commitment on the college's part to generate an endowment of $900,000 to continue the program after the $75,000 annual grant from Pew has ended. During 1988-89, the second phase of the challenge was met with a commitment of $600,000 to the endowment. The Pew funds, which have assisted 70 members of our faculty during the last two years, have stimulated faculty growth and raised the morale of our faculty.

Over the next three years, Juniata will receive $225,000 from The Whitaker Foundation of Camp Hill for the purchase of scientific equipment in support of the biology department. The grant will assist the college in updating the biology curriculum to give increased emphasis to molecular and cellular biology, permit more students to engage in early laboratory experiences, and provide significant independent research opportunities for advanced students.

The $1 million special campaign for athletic facilities, begun in April, 1987, was completed in 1988-89. The new Knox Stadium and Oller Track were dedicated in the fall of 1988.

The total membership of the Founders Club increases to 2,272 members through the course of last year. This represents the addition of 577 new members who contributed $100.00 or more to the College. Seventy-nine people now enjoy membership in the prestigious Quinter Society. These committed individuals provided support of at least $5,000 to the College. What is it that drives 2,272 persons to be members of the Founders Club? It is care for the next generation — and the next and the next.

These highlights of the past provide some insight into what Juniata is today. To fully appreciate what is occurring in the college community, I urge you to visit the campus; you will be pleased with what you see.

THE QUINTER SOCIETY

Membership in the Juniata College Quinter Society is limited to those benefactors whose annual giving has reached $5,000 or more a year. Quinterians become permanent members of the Society when their lifetime giving equals or exceeds $100,000.

This special society is named for Juniata's first president. James Quinter was a leader in the educational reform movement of the Brethren Church in the second half of the 19th century. The founding of the Brethren Normal School in Huntingdon in 1876 fulfilled a vision that he had cherished for many years. When Jacob Zuck's untimely death threatened the continued existence of the school, Quinter's leadership assured the founders that the fledgling Normal School would carry on to become Juniata College.

In addition to invitations to special Quinter Society evenings, members receive a distinctive gold lapel pin, inscription of the names of the permanent Quinter Society members on a plaque to be mounted in the foyer of Ellis College Center, and prominent listing in the annual Report of the President.

The president and trustees of Juniata College extend their thanks and wish to give special recognition to the following members of the Quinter Society.

A Golden Year for Founders Club

Captain Will Judy '11 would be proud of Juniatians! In 1939 when Captain Judy was the national alumni association president and Harold B. Brumbaugh '33 was the newly appointed alumni secretary, Judy proposed forming a "One Hundred Club" for alumni who gave $100 or more annually.

From twenty-nine members in that year, membership has grown to 2272 in the five levels of Founders Club during this golden anniversary year 1988-1989. These leadership gifts are essential to the advancement of the educational effectiveness of Juniata College.

Quinter Society	$5,000 and more
Presidents Circle	$1,000 to $4,999
Patrons Circle	$ 500 to $ 999
Associates Circle	$ 250 to $ 499
Builders Circle	$ 100 to $ 249

The College recognizes with pride the significance of Founders Club membership through the generations.

FRIENDS OF THE JUNIATA LIBRARY

College constituents who have a special interest in library development support the Friends of Juniata Library organizations. During 1988-89, persons named below made contributions to assure the continued strength of the general collections housed in the Beeghly Library. Members listed are in one or more the the following three categories: contributions of cash; donors of books appraised for gift-in-kind credit; those who have given books but did not request appraisal. As the Library's total collection approaches 200,000 volumes, the Friends organization is invaluable to the assurance of sound quality and steady growth.

A New Kind of Excellence

When I was in graduate school many years ago, long before I joined the Juniata faculty, it happened that there was a meeting of college administrators in Boston, Massachusetts. The presidents and deans of the various Brethren colleges were there and one evening an informal meeting was organized to bring them together with many of us who were then engaged in graduate study at the universities in the Boston area. As you might imagine, it was a bit of an awkward evening — those of us in the academic lumpenproletariat trying to socialize with these eminent worthies who might turn out to be potential employers. After a while, trying to put us at ease, they suggested that perhaps we had questions we would like to ask them.

Nobody quite knew what to say but finally I pumped up my courage and asked what each of them thought was distinctive about his institution. What made their colleges unique? The response was kind of funny. You would have thought that I had asked something indecent. They looked at each other rather uneasily, and shifted around in their chairs, and acted as though they had never thought about such a question before.

And then, one by one they began to rumble — you know how college presidents talk — and phrases like “the well-rounded personality,” “the development of intellectual potential,” and “liberation from ignorance” began to tumble out. Actually, I don’t remember what any of them said — except one. The last one to respond was the president of Juniata College, Calvert Ellis. He was the only one there who acted as though he had thought about it before and he was quick to answer.

“Excellence,” he said; Juniata College was committed to the achievement of excellence. I was impressed. Here was a man who knew what he was doing and was not afraid to make clear what he wanted from his faculty and from his students.

What did President Ellis mean by “excellence?”

Curiously, when you look for published statements he made on this theme during his 25-year tenure as president, there is little to be found. Once, in an issue of the Alumni Bulletin published in 1945, he speaks of the standard of “accuracy” that all disciplines should strive for. This isn’t much, but it is revealing. Exactness, precision, clarity — that was what counted. The high standards of science.

However, the real meaning of what President Ellis meant by excellence is to be found not so much in what he said at the time but in the shape which he gave to the college under his leadership. Here is the proof of the pudding. Here is where you see his vision of excellence at work. This standard of excellence was particularly well-suited to the natural sciences and the admirable reputation which Juniata enjoys today is largely the result of that vision.

As impressive as this was and is, I don’t have to tell you that this notion of excellence would have some deleterious consequences for academic disciplines with other intellectual priorities — qualities such as insight, aesthetic sensitivity, imagination, moral awareness. Try as they might, the humanistic disciplines could not win against the demand for exactness and clarity. They could not match the sciences in precision or in the practical manipulation of nature. The present status of the arts and the humanities reveals the outcome of that unequal combat. What cannot be precisely defined, what cannot be exactly measured, must take a back seat to what can.

What is the origin of this vision of excellence as precision and clarity? How did we come by it? Obviously it is not peculiar to Juniata, although Juniata has vigorously embraced this ideal.

It is really an old story. Perhaps it can be traced as far back as Plato and Aristotle. Although it really isn’t fair to hold either one of these great fathers of western thinking responsible for their intellectual children, it must be acknowledged that each one seems to have fathered an illegitimate child. Who knows how it happened? A thoughtless moment, a careless dalliance, maybe too much to drink at a faculty party. But the progeny were quite distinctive. One, we’ll call him “Brute Fact," seems to have been Aristotle's misbegotten offspring. He was the strong, silent type. Never had much to say, but was obdurate and immovable in his behavior. The other was Plato's misconception, one might say. We'll call her, "Sweet Reason." She was lively and very talkative and she just loved meeting people and going to parties. Kind of flighty, but she was always fun.

Well, these two grew up together and, not surprisingly, they fell in love when they were quite young. You can readily see that they were made for each other. Without her, Brute Fact was rather dumb and anti-social. He never did anything, he never had anything to say — like a lot of men, actually! But in the company of Sweet Reason he became very outspoken and got involved in a lot of projects.

Sweet Reason, on the other hand, just loved his strength and reliability. He was always there for her and he tolerated almost anything she wanted to do. True, she never stopped talking, but he didn't seem to mind. In fact, he was glad that she always had something to say that made him seem important. When the wedding was announced everyone said that it was a marriage made in heaven. It was to be the wedding not only of the century but of the millennium. Of course it was a big church wedding and it was presided over by theologians and high officials of the church. St. Thomas Aquinas performed the ceremony. Everybody who was anybody was invited, and it was an unforgettable time. In fact, there is still so much nostalgia for that wedding that every spring we dress up in the ceremonial robes we wore on that occasion, hoping we can once again be witness to the splendid marriage of Brute Face and Sweet Reason.

But I am sorry to tell you that this will not happen. The marriage didn't last. They kept up appearances for quite a while, but it wasn't too long until there was talk that Sweet Reason had been flirting with other admirers. Eventually she ran off with one of them, a Frenchman named Descartes. They had a torrid affair that shocked a lot of people because of the way Descartes showed Sweet Reason how to be independent. She learned from him that the secret of desirability was the appearance of purity and indifference. (Nowadays we call this objectivity.) This was only appearance, of course. She could not live without lovers — without them she was only an empty dream. But her admirers didn't know that. They only knew how good she could make them look by her dazzling demands for consistency and clarity. They didn't see that she would do this for almost anyone. All it took was absolute devotion.

What about Brute Fact in the meantime? As you might guess, he sulked. This is why Sweet Reason left him. He never had much to say and without her he had a rather sour disposition. After she left, he took to hanging out with some unsavory types — an Italian named Machiavelli, an Englishman named Thomas Hobbes, and David Hume, a Scotsman. They were all spoilers and could only talk about the selfishness and brutality of human nature and how little the human mind could know. This may all have been true, but people didn't much like to hear it.

People much preferred to listen to the admirers of Sweet Reason because she made everything seem so clear and consistent and optimistic. Never mind that she flitted from lover to lover, often making quite contradictory schemes to appear equally plausible.

Nevertheless, there was one more try at reconciliation. Things looked really hopeful when Isaac Newton brought the two together again in what appeared to be a wonderful demonstration that their marriage really could work, that the facts of nature could be accurately and clearly expressed by reason, especially mathematical reason. Everyone was so delighted with the reunion that nobody noticed later on when Sweet Reason began sneaking out again and carried on a secret affair with a mathematician named Gauss. This time she was the teacher. Mathematics not only didn't need facts, but actually seemed to be better off without them. Even though Gauss went to his death keeping the secret, it leaked out anyway, and mathematics has prided itself on its purity and independence ever since. This made it clear. Sweet Reason was no longer wedded to Brute Fact. The separation was final. She was a free woman.

A couple of well-known philosophers tried hard to legitimize Sweet Reason and made a great show of her self-sufficiency (Bertrand Russell and Alfred North Whitehead: Principia Mathematica), but the truth was that she really could not live without lovers. She was nothing without them but in the end she was faithless to them all. Philosophers, physicists, mathematicians, historians, literary critics all had their way with her — and they all learned to their chagrin how indifferent she could be to their devotion. The economists are the latest to take up with her. Like all those before them, they think it is true love. Must be. The more she humiliates them, the more devoted they are!

You see the point of my little allegory. The ideal of reason to which we have been committed and which has dominated our curriculum is an illusion, perhaps a delusion. The appearance of objectivity depends precisely on its detachment. The end result of this has been demonstrated rather elegantly by Albert Einstein when he showed that there is no privileged point of view in the universe. Every point of view has its own frame of reference and is as legitimate, as "objective," as any other.

A similar and even more serious result has occurred to humanists who have succumbed to Sweet Reason's seductions. The canons of literature have "deconstructed" into a mere play of words, "interpretation upon interpretation, referring to nothing other than each other, in an endless spiral, with no beginning and no end." (Sallie McFague, Models of God) Unhappily we find ourselves alienated not only from our own real subject matter but from each other as well.

There is no question that the criteria of exactness and clarity will indeed give us "accuracy" — but accuracy about what? When Descartes carried on his affair with Sweet Reason he promised that her powers would make us "the lords and possessors of nature." She certainly has done that; we have indeed landed men on the moon and have sent rockets even beyond the solar system. But it is also true that scarcely any stream or body of water in the world remains unpolluted, rain forests are on the verge of disappearing from the face of the earth and virtually every week some plant or animal species does in fact disappear. Radioactive waste now seeping into the ground water will be with us for generations to come. The number of hungry and homeless women and children on the streets in this country number many hundreds of thousands.

The fact is, Sweet Reason does not care. She is clear, she is precise, she shows you the bottom line — but she couldn't care less. A bumper sticker I saw on a car recently sums it all up rather nicely: "The one with the most toys wins."

Not only methodologically but morally we need a new kind of excellence — a model of engaged reason, not detached reason. Where to find it?

Long ago the ancient Greeks revered a certain great goddess, Athena, who actually was a distant relative to our star-crossed lovers, Brute Fact and Sweet Reason. After the coming of Christianity, however, she seemed to fade away. Perhaps she is not gone — perhaps we might gain some glimpse of her if we are no longer bedazzled by Sweet Reason's analytical strip-tease show.

Bear in mind, Athena was not born the usual way — she sprang forth full-grown from the head of Zeus, the father of the gods. She is the very embodiment of committed intelligence. In the Iliad it is she who restrains Achilles from rashly striking out against his king and leader, and it is she who is the special friend and companion to Odysseus, the daring wanderer and adventurer. That is, she appears to those who chance the unknown, who go beyond themselves — but she makes no promises. If you must have certainty then Athena is not your goddess. She comes to those who are in action, to those who challenge necessity with imagination. As to Odysseus, she brings energy and cleverness and prudent judgment and sustaining vision. She wins though. She is Athena Nike, the goddess of victory. She is excellence.

Athena is a virgin goddess, a power in herself. She does not need lovers. She cannot be commanded or seduced. Remember that she is always portrayed as fully-armed, with helmet and shield and breast-plate and carrying a spear. She is ready for combat — she knows that real life is constant struggle and she demands courage and honesty of those who follow her so that they give way neither to authority nor to shallow cleverness in argument. The wisdom which she represents is never established once and for all but must be fought out on each occasion, in the live and open-ended contest between yes and no.

Athena is above all the goddess of civilization. She is the patron deity of classical Athens — the city proudly described by Pericles as "the school of Hellas" where its citizens carry out "the most varied forms of action with the utmost versatility and grace." The most beautiful building in the world, the Parthenon, was built in her honor — incomparable in its synthesis of sensuous appeal and rational form. The poet Aeschylus pays tribute to her as the one who persuades Athenians that fairness, not retribution, is the only form of justice possible in a democracy — the only way to avoid the extremes of either anarchy or despotism. And most important of all (for us), it is in Athens, under Athena's patronage, where Plato and Aristotle first lay down the foundations of academic life — the life of systematic inquiry.

One more thing about Athena: interestingly enough she is also the patron of artisans and craftsmen, especially the craft of weaving. In one of his dialogues (Statesman), Plato uses Athena's weaving as a metaphor for the political process. That is, she not only nurtures the practical arts that sustain the life of the community, but she also nurtures the arts that bind the community together politically — weaving together diversity and extremity in such a way that all strands find a place and contribute to the whole fabric. (Stassinopoulos, The Gods of Greece)

What I am suggesting is an entirely different ideal of excellence — the excellence of committed intelligence, rather than that of detached reason. We can no longer uphold the ideal man of reason as the rational subject positioned outside time and space and outside of history and community. Precision and clarity do not ultimately justify anything, least of all themselves. If you see the truth in Athena's wisdom, you will see that there is no alternative now but to announce your commitments and leap into battle. The issue will be decided in open combat, not by some disembodied voice of reason coming down from the sky.

Too long in academic life we have assumed that intellect is enough, that if we produce reasons enough then action will be forthcoming. We have overlooked entirely the indispensable role of courage and commitment. Some years ago Robert Kennedy pointed out that courage was the one virtue that made all the other virtues possible. If we took this seriously at Juniata it would make a difference in both what we teach and how we teach. It would make a difference in whom we recruit as faculty as well as the kind of students we seek.

We are here today to celebrate excellence. Perhaps some of you recall the criteria for judging excellence in last summer's Olympic competitions in Korea. In Gymnastics the final six-tenths of a point awarded were for Courage, Originality and Virtuosity. Often this fraction of a point was the difference as to whether one was a medal winner or not. "C-O-V," the commentators abbreviated it. This is the Athenic ideal I place before you: Courage, Originality, Virtuosity.
